EVENTS

1. 'Anglo-American Clandestine Cooperation' with Thomas Maguire and David Gioe

12 October

All Souls College, Oxford

This event will evaluate what explains the ups, downs, and endurance of the several intelligence partnerships that form part of the Special Relationship. Drawing on original research from the Cold War through to the present day, Tom and Dave emphasise the importance of breaking this intelligence relationship down into its constituent parts when analysing its characteristics and drivers, for not all have looked the same or responded to the same imperatives and influences. This forms part of a wider series organised by the University of Oxford's Centre for the Changing Character of War and King's College London's Defence Studies Department re-evaluating different features of Anglo-American strategic relations.

2. 'RUSI Annual Security Lecture' with Jeremy Fleming

11 October

Online

This year's Annual Lecture: 'If China is the Question, What is the Answer?' will be given by Sir Jeremy Fleming, Director of GCHQ, on the evolving technological environment in the context of national security and geopolitics.

Sir Jeremy will explore the nexus between technology, security and the economy. With the rise of China in the technology arena, he will outline how diverging values and approaches to national security interests can result in drastically different outcomes for society. What collective action is needed by the UK and its allies to maintain our security and to offer a responsible and competitive alternative?

3. '13 Days in October: The Cuban Missile Crisis' with Timothy Naftali

13 October

Online

To mark the 60th anniversary of the Cuban Missile Crisis, the International Spy Museum is pleased to offer an exclusive 90-minute professional development webinar for middle and high school teachers. Join Spy educators for this interactive webinar on how to combine declassified primary documents, role playing, and intelligence analysis to engage students in the study of this critical historical event. In addition, teachers will hear from presidential historian and co-author of the prize-winning book, One Hell of a Gamble: Khrushchev, Castro, and Kennedy, 1958-1964, Timothy Naftali, and Spy Museum Historian, Andrew Hammond, as they discuss the significance of this case study and how intelligence successes can shape the course of history.

4. 'The Evolution of North Korean Espionage' with Amanda Won

13 October

Institute of World Politics, Washington DC

In the world of espionage, North Korea remains one of the hardest targets as it remains the most reclusive and enigmatic communist regime on the planet. The question remains, then, how did North Korea develop its Modus Operandi (M.O.) in order to achieve its ultimate foreign policy goal? – which is the “revolutionization” of South Korea through reunification under Kim Jong Un.

Amanda Won recently graduated from The Institute of World Politics' Doctor of Statecraft and National Security program, and beginning in September 2022, she will be serving as Director of the China Asia Program at IWP. Amanda is also the founder of IWP's Asia Initiative Lecture Series through which diverse scholar-practitioners have presented their expertise on Asia.

6. 'Intelligence Operations across Multi-Domain Environments' with Stephen Iwicki

24 October

Institute of World Politics, Washington DC

This lecture will discuss how intelligence capabilities and operations have evolved to enable our national government leaders and military forces to seamlessly counter and/or defeat a near-peer adversary capable of contesting the U.S. in all domains [air, land, maritime, space, and cyberspace] in both competition and armed conflict.

Col. (ret.) Stephen Iwicki has served in the U.S. Intelligence community in both a military and industry capacity for the last 35 years.

8. 'Special Forces Berlin: Clandestine Cold War Operations' with James Stejskal

30 October

Online

During the Cold War, a unique US Army Special Forces Detachment was stationed in West Berlin. Initially known as Detachment "A"- Berlin, it existed for one reason: to cause havoc behind the enemy's lines should there be Soviet/Warsaw Pact attack on NATO in Europe.

Former Special Forces Berlin member and CIA field officer James Stejskal will draw from his book Special Forces Berlin as he tells us about the unit's origins and the reasons for its existence through recently declassified files and first-person histories.
